Excerpt: . . . when they are not up to grade. so why not be as watchful on the other hand It is idiot nearly so much the fault of principals. who can form only a superficial estimate at best in a single conversation or test. The teacher is the one who should discover if a new pupil is beyond his grade. We do too much wholesale teaching. A teacher should try to remember that each child has a personality of his own, a life to live, and a right to have his individuality recognized and respected. When she does that. she is less likely to be ignorant of the capabilities of the children she teaches. I shall be more careful after this in my observation of new pupils. said Miss Ward. It had never struck me what an injustice it might be to grade a child too low....
