E553 1999a OCLC Number: (OCoLC)41792217 Subject: Cervix uteri -- Cancer -- Treatment -- United States. Excerpt: . . . me to my Florida colleague, Senator Connie Mack. Connie, do you have the time to wait for the opening statements before testifying Senator Mack. Sure. Mr. Bilirakis. Okay. I first want to applaud the work that you and Priscilla have done in the fight against cancer. You certainly will be missed in the Senate, but I trust your leadership in these issues will continue. I now recognize the ranking member, Mr. Brown of Ohio. Mr. Brown. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for arranging this hearing. I would also like to thank Senator Mack and Congresswoman Eshoo for their fine work, and our other distinguished panelists today. While I am pleased that the subcommittee will hear from a wide range of witnesses, I am disappointed that it was not possible to include a representative from the College of American Pathologists. This organization, representing some 16,000 physicians, offers a unique perspective on the detection, diagnosis, and treatment of cervical cancer. Their input would have been extremely valuable. The tragedy of cervical cancer is twofold. It is tragic that hundreds of thousands of women confront this disease, a profoundly debilitating and deadly illness. It is tragic that cervical cancer remains such a virulent killer, when it is within our power to prevent it. Cervical cancer is a national and international public health issue. It accounts for 6 percent of cancers diagnosed in women in the United States, taking nearly 5,000 lives. Worldwide, more than 470,000 new cases are diagnosed each year. In both industrialized and non-industrialized nations, cervical cancer takes its greatest toll on...
